DEAR PARENTS

One of the best ways for young children to have success with patience is to prepare them mentally for times when they will have to be patient. For example, if you are going to be running an errand to the post office and your child will have to be patient waiting in line, talk beforehand about what is going to happen. Try saying something along the lines of: "We are going to the post office. You will have to wait patiently in line with me, but when we get to the end I will hold you up so you can see all the mail. You will be able to practice being a hero with patience just like we've been working on!"

Patience is one of those character traits that we all get plenty of opportunity to practice at home having to be patient with one another. Don't be discouraged when you or your child fails at being patient. Just ask for forgiveness and keep practicing!

Below you will find information on the super hero for this month. You can also visit our website for this information as well.

In His love,
